Five Steps to Simplify the Endplay

In the face of bad luck, using the Endplay as a way to make the contract has fascinated bridge players for decades. While learning and practicing this specific skill, you'll notice your declarer play improves!

Here is the basic idea:

- Understand what is going on in the deal
- Use the Five Steps to implement the endplay
- Recognize a suit better led by a defender – Improve your odds even when cards are poorly placed
- Identify the exit card to put a defender on lead – Play the exit card near the end of the deal
- Eliminate the defender's options – Play trumps and side suits before the exit card
- The Throw-in: Put a defender on lead with the exit card – Play the exit card when the defender has no winning options
